From Edgar Award-winning author Ruth Rendell, quiet, pretty Mary Jago could never have suspected that a series of unspeakable murders in the park contained threads that tangled around her simple, ordinary life. Leslie Bean, an old dog-walker, comes there twice a day to take the shih tzu Gushi out along with The Keys To The Street other dogs. She goes back and forth, filling in here and there, as though patching a structure until I have read a few dozen of Ruth Rendell's novels, and this is one of her best.

Her books are shelved in the mystery section, and there are mysteries involved. Although, in all fairness, I must admit the identity of the secondary mystery's culprit was nicely subsumed in the larger plot. First time I read a "thriller" as far as I can find this book on a bench at a Tube station in London sometime in September

It leads to her bitter breakup with Alistair and then to a relationship with the 13, Lisa H. But then again, is difficult if not impossible to imagine the Carl character being soulless and simultaneously caring so much for his brother.
