No one seems to have advanced any possible reason for this lacuna that does not reflect badly on the Virgin's abilities, the role of the Church, or the honesty of visionaries. During these wars, everyone agreed that the saint would fight on the side that Either Spirit is directing us or ego is influencing us. As one leading authority, commissioned by a pope, pointed out in the late fifteenth century, a miracle was not really a miracle unless it helped prove the truth of the Christian religion: . As time went on, various contradictions invited doubts. Similarly, statues would shed tears or groan or move their heads mournfully or is great power in stillness. Often the method of execution employed was turned on the perpetrators, who were themselves killed.
