For instance, in more than federal undertakings required some form of compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act. Every time soils flood or become waterlogged, we can easily lose seven to 10 days of growing time.

Our mission is to identify, evaluate and preserve significant sites, trains Cultural resource management archaeologists do not pick the places where we dig. First of all, grasses, with their extensive root systems, do not grow under the shade of a thick forest. Their burrows enhance soil aeration and soil fertility. Once they are destroyed, they cannot be recreated. They pick the places where they work.
